 That never were we musk to thine ear,
 Under I spoke. Shakespeare. Comedy of Errors.
 UNWEARIED. adj.
 1. Not put to use; unemployed.
 Eke, whose husband about that time died, forgetting the absent Plangus, or, at last, not hoping of him to attain to aspiring a purpose, left no art untried, which might keep the line from breaking, whereat the fish was already taken. Shakespeare.
 Sure he that made us with such large discourse,
 Looking before and after, gave us not
 That capability and godlike reason,
 To rust in us unwar'd. Shakespeare's Hamlet.
 2. Not accustomed.
 He, unwar'd to such entertainment, did shortly and plainly answer what he was. Sidney, b. ii.
 One, whose eyes,
 Albeit unwar'd to the melting mood,
 Dropt tears as full as the Arabian trees
 Their medicinal gum. Shakespeare. Othello.
 What art thou?
 Not from above: no, thy wan looks betray Diminish'd light, and eyes unwar'd to day. Dryden.
 UNWEARABLE. adj. Useless; serving no purpose.
 I was persuaded, by experience, that it might not be un-useful in the capacities it was intended for. Glover.
 Birds flutter with their wings, when there is but a little down upon them, and they are as yet utterly unwar'd for flying. Shakespeare. As You Like It.

 'Tis hard to reconcile. Shakespeare. Macbeth.
 Soon as th' unwelcome news
 From earth arriv'd at heaven-gate, displeas'd
 All were who heard. Milton's Par. Lost, b. x.
 Though he that brings unwelcome news
 Has but a losing office, yet he that shews
 Your danger first, and then your way to safety,
 May heal that wound he made. Shakespeare's Sonnet.
 Forc'd from her presence, and condemn'd to live;
 Unwelcome freedom, and unthank'd reprieve. Dryden.
 From the very first instances of perception, some things are grateful, and others unwelcome to them; some things that they incline to, and others that they fly. Locke.
 Such hasty nights as these, would give very unwelcome interruptions to our labours. Bentley's Sermons.
 UNWELT. adj. Not lamented; not bemoaned.
 Our fatherless distress was left unwept;
 Your widow dolours likewise be unwept. Shakespeare. Rich. III.
 We, but the slaves that mount you to the throne:
 A base, ignoble crowd, without a name;
 Unwept, unworthy of the funeral flame;
 By duty bound to forfeit each his life. Dryden.
 UNWELT. adj. Not moist.
 Once I meant to meet
 My fate with face unmov'd, and eyes unwept;
 Yet since I have thee here in narrow room,
 My tears shall set thee first afloat within thy tomb. Dryden.
 UNWELT. adj. Not punished; not corrected with the rod.
 Tremble, thou wretch,
 That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
 Unwept of justice. Shakespeare. K. Lear.
 Once I caught him in a lie;
 And then, unwept, he had the grace to cry. Pope.
 UNWHOLESOME. adj.
 1. Infalubrious; mischievous to health.
 The discovery of the disposition of the air, is good for the prognosticks of wholesome and unwholesome years. Bacon.
 There I a prisoner chain'd, scarce freely draw
 The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
 Unwholesome draught; but here I find amends,
 The breath of heav'n fresh-blowing, pure and sweet,
 With day-spring born: here leave me to respire. Milton.
 How can any one be assur'd, that his meat and drink are not poisoned, and made unwholesome before they are brought to him? South.
 Rome is never fuller of nobility than in summer; for the country towns are so infested with unwholesome vapours, that they dare not trust themselves in them; while the heats
 last. Adrian on Italy.
 Children born healthy, often contract diseases from an unwholesome nurse. A Treatise on Diet.

 Unweldedly they wallow first in ooze;
 Then in the shady covert seek repose. Dryden.
 UNWELDEDNESS. n. s. Heaviness; difficulty to move, or be moved.
 To what a cumbersome unwelddedness,
 And burdensome corpulence my love had grown,
 But that I made it feed upon
 That which love worst endures, discretion. Donne.
 The supposed unwelddedness of its massy bulk, grounded upon our experience of the inaptitude of great and heavy bodies to motion, is a mere imposture of our senses. Glover.
 UNWELDEDLY. adv. Unmanageable; not easily moving or moved; bulky; weighty; ponderous.
 An ague, meeting many humours in a fit, unwelddedly body of fifty-eight years old, in four or five fits, carried him out of the world. Clariden.
 Part, huge of bulk!
 Wallowing unwelddedly, enormous in their gait,
 Tempest the ocean. Milton's Par. Lost, b. vii.
 Unweldedly fims of wealth, which higher mount,
 Than files of martial'd figures can account. Dryden.
 Nothing here th' unwelddedly rock walls,
 Rebounding harkles from the plaited scales,
 That, firmly join'd, prefer'd him from a wound,
 With native armour cruell'd all around. Addison's Ovid.
 What carriage can bear away all the rude and unwelddedly toppings of a branchy tree at once? Watts's Impr. of the Mind.
